

36. When making a basic decision of where to fish, a trophy trout angler should:
- always go where the biggest fish have been caught over recent decades
  - not think about the weather at all
  - consider the weather and select an area either enhanced by it or not ruined by it
  - always go south
37. When planning an outing, an angler should:
- think of multiple spots within an area which might have potential
  - consider any and all potential hazards to navigation in play
  - predict the probable feeding mood of the fish, given the conditions
  - all of the above
38. Which of the following is most true about pace of movement when wading?
- One should never move much; standing still is better.
  - Proper pace of movement is dictated by conditions and type of spot chosen.
  - One should always move forward at a slow, steady pace.
  - Covering more water is always better than covering less water.
39. Which of the following best describes the truth related to most presentation styles?
- Slow and steady works best.
  - Rhythmic parts of a presentation attract attention, but variations generate strikes.
  - Working a lure fast is counterproductive in all negative bite situations.
  - Color is usually more important than presentation.
